Color Palettes

Overview

Use the primary palette on all branded materials, such as logos, corporate identity, web site, advertising, collateral, and imprintables. The colors printed here are NOT guaranteed to be matches. The use of a Pantone Swatch book is the best way to work with your vendors and assure color correctness. Always proof anything before production runs begin to assure that the colors are satisfactory. The color palettes can be adapted and expanded upon; this document includes examples of how the brand colors have been used to create individual identities.

Dealing With Consistent Color Using Pantones:

The accuracy of color is critical in design. Because what you see on your monitor is never what will appear on a printed sheet, designers need a standardized color key.

It can be very frustrating to see the logo you worked hard to create look deep blue on the client's letterhead, blue-greenish on his business card, and light blue on his very expensive envelopes.

A way to prevent this is by using a standardized color matching system, such as the PANTONE MATCHING SYSTEM (PMS). Though PANTONE is not the only color standardization system, it is the most widely used and the one that most printers understand. Aside from being able to have consistency, PMS colors allow you to use colors that cannot be mixed in CMYK.

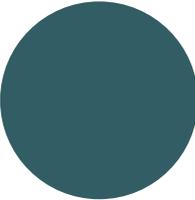

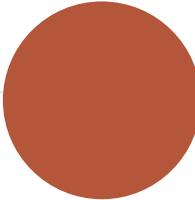

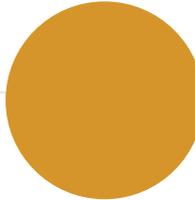

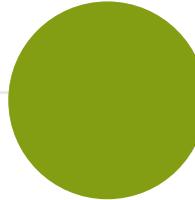

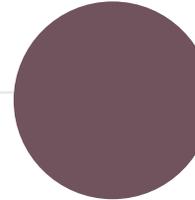

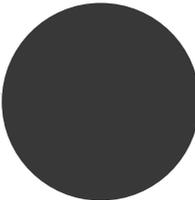

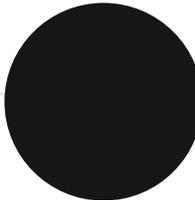

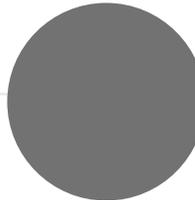

Primary Palette

(A.K.A. BRIGHTENED HISTORIC PALETTE)

The primary palette is a brightened version of the historic palette, although some colors did not change. It is the one in use across all Revitalizing Waterbury branding, as well as some other organizations or partners in the community.

File Format Guide

All of the included graphic files might not work on your machine, but that does not mean that the file is corrupted or that there is something wrong with your machine. These files address all of the normal uses that a community implemented design would require. Always make sure to inform vendors that you have these different file formats available.

.PDF

File Type: Portable Document Format
Category: Page Layout Files
File Description: Cross-platform document created by Adobe Acrobat or a program with the Acrobat plug-in; commonly used for e-mail attachments or for saving publications in a standard format for viewing on multiple computers; usually created from another document instead of from scratch.

.JPG

File Type: JPEG Image File
Category: Raster Image Files
File Description: Compressed graphic format standardized by the JPEG (Joint Photographic Experts Group) group; commonly used for storing digital photos since the format supports up to 24-bit color; also a common format for publishing Web graphics; compressed using lossy compression, which may noticeably reduce the image quality if a high amount of compression is used.

.PNG

File Type: PNG
Category: Raster Image Files
File Description: PNG (Portable Graphics Format) is the most frequently used uncompressed raster image format on the internet. A lossless data compression, this format was created to replace the Graphics Interchange Format (GIF). PNG file format is an open format with no copyright limitations. Like GIF images, PNG also have the ability to display transparent backgrounds.

.AI

File Type: Adobe Illustrator File
Category: Vector Image Files
File Description: Vector image file created by Adobe Illustrator; composed of paths, or lines connected by points, instead of bitmap data; may include objects, color, and text; often referred to as a Illustrator drawing. Illustrator documents can be opened with Photoshop, but the image will be rasterized, meaning it will be converted from a vector image to a bitmap.

.EPS

File Type: Encapsulated PostScript
Category: Vector Image Files
File Description: PostScript (.PS) file that may contain vector graphics, bitmap images, and text; includes an embedded preview image in bitmap format; often used for transferring between different operating systems.

.GIF

File Type: Graphical Interchange Format
Category: Raster Image Files
File Description: Image file that may contain up to 256 indexed colors; color palette may be a predefined set of colors or may be adapted to the colors in the image; lossless format, meaning the clarity of the image is not compromised with GIF compression. GIFs are common format for Web graphics, especially small images and images that contain text, such as navigation buttons; however, JPEG (JPG) images are better for showing photos because they are not limited in the number of colors they can display.

Advertising

Advertising

There are several fundamental design strategies that will allow for connections to be made while also allowing your business to reinforce its own identity. The use of clean design, similar color palettes, and a consistent logo element can create an independently managed community image campaign.

The following pages show some of the design fundamentals that will be important to use when creating your ads. The design of this ad series is based on the work by advertising expert David Ogilvy who devised an ad layout formula for some of his most successful ads that became known as “The Ogilvy.” The illustration on the facing page is the basic design that follows the classic visual, headline, caption, copy, signature format. From this basic ad layout, other variations are derived.

- Try changing the margins, fonts, leading, size of the initial cap, size of the visual, and placing the copy in columns to customize the basic format of this ad layout.
- Insert a visual at the top of the page. If you are using a photo, bleed it to the edge of the page or add space for maximum impact.
- For photos, place a descriptive caption below.
- Put your headline next.
- Follow with your main ad copy. Consider a drop cap as a lead-in to help draw the reader into the copy.
- Place your contact information (signature) in the lower right corner. That’s generally the last place a reader’s eye gravitates to when reading an ad.

Anatomy of an Ad.

Ads come in all shapes and sizes but they have a common goal – to sell a product, a service, a brand. Text, visuals, or a combination of the two are the main elements of any print ad.

Headlines

The main headline may be the strongest element of the ad or it may be secondary to a strong visual. Some ads may have subheads and other title elements as well.

Contact

The contact or signature of an ad may appear anywhere in the ad although it is usually near the bottom. It consists of one or more of: Logo, Advertiser Name, Address, Phone Number, Map or Driving Directions, Web Site Address, Extras.

Some print ads may have additional special elements such as an attached business reply envelope, tear-out portion with a coupon, tip sheet, product sample.

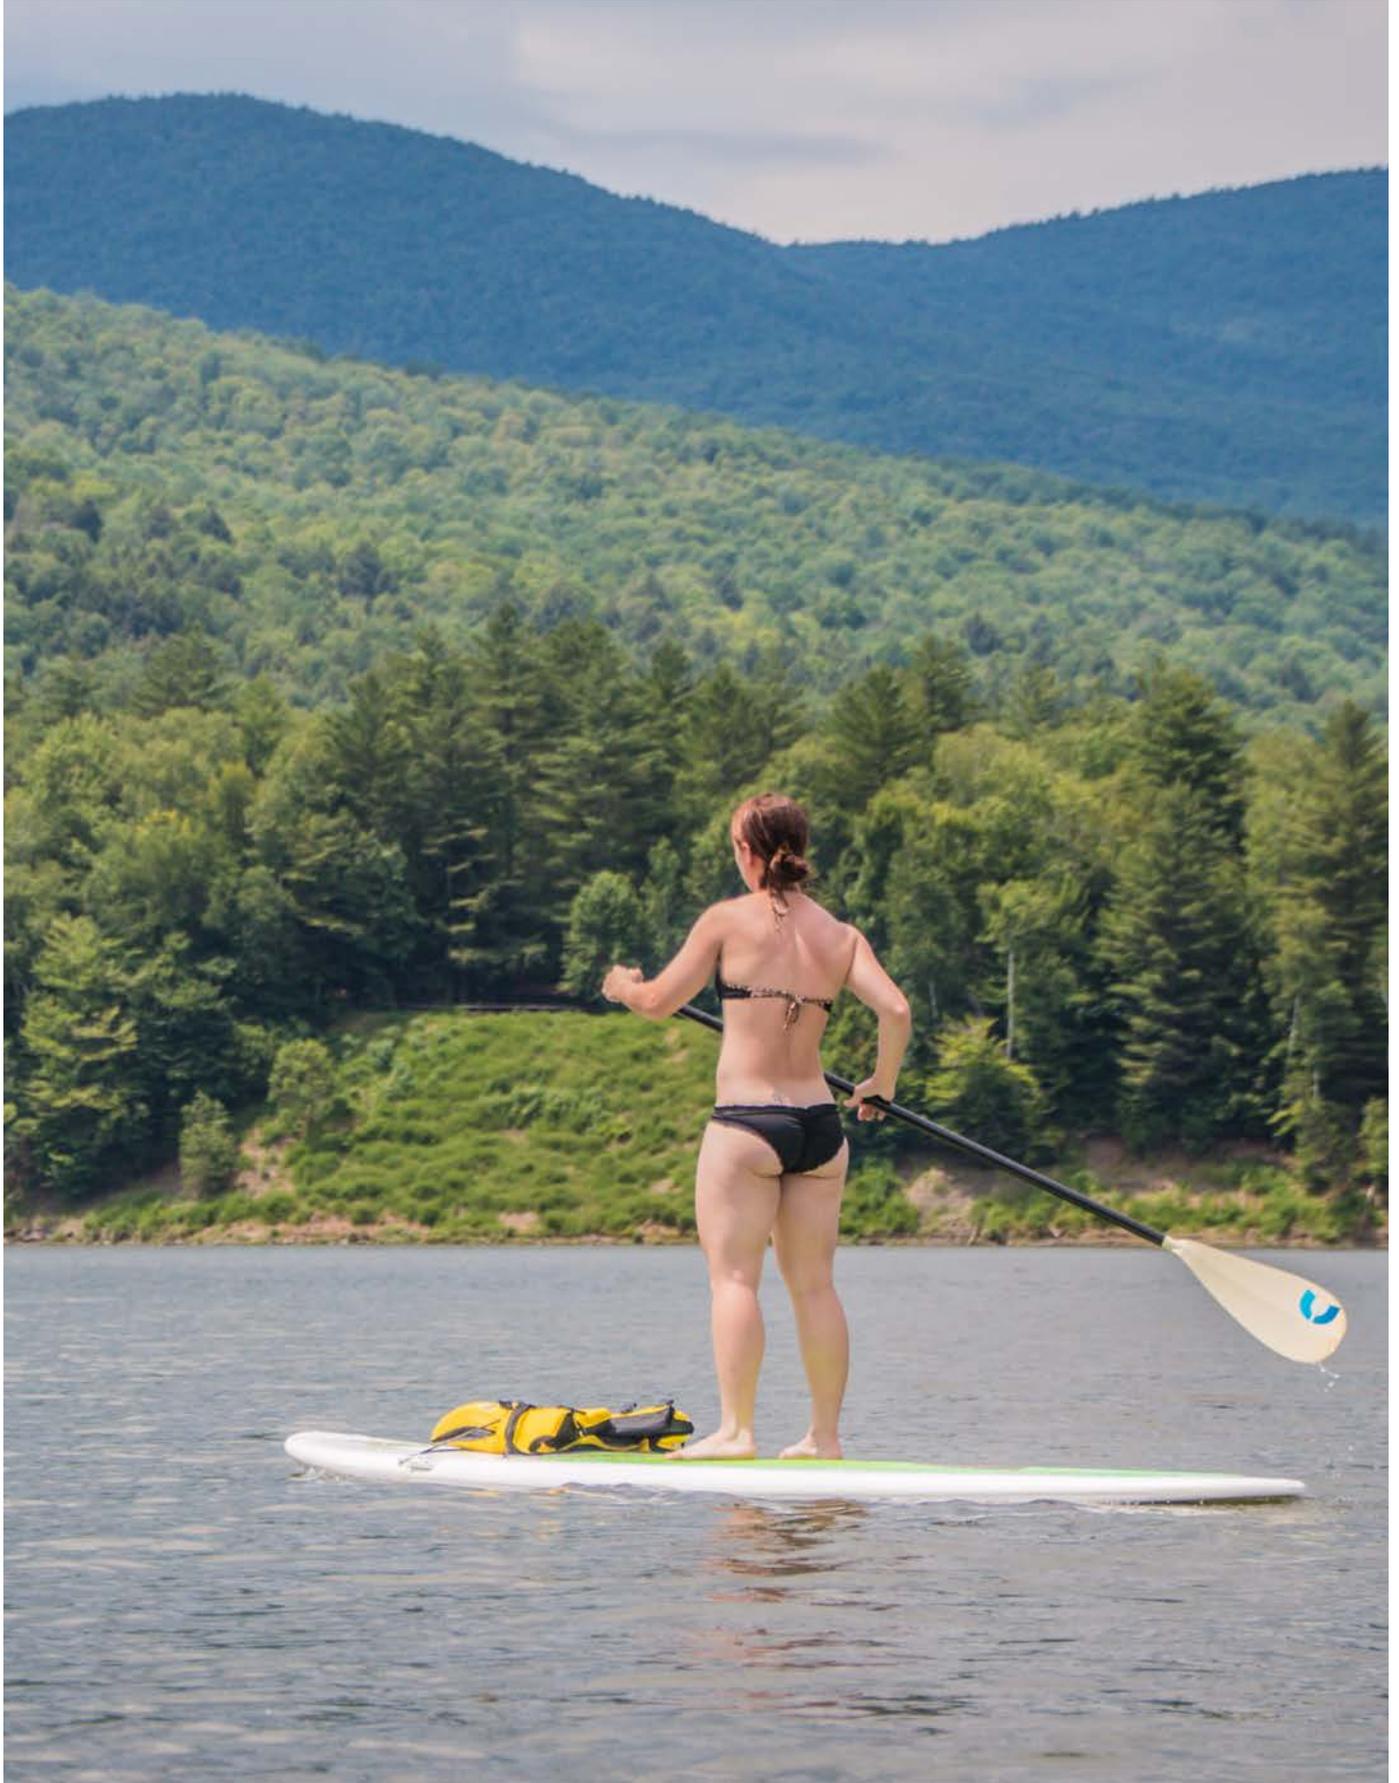

Artwork

Photographs, drawings, and graphic embellishments are a key visual element of many types of ads. Some ads may have only a single visual while others might have several pictures. Even text-only ads might have some graphics in the form of decorative bullets or borders. When included with visuals the caption is one of the first things most readers look at after the visual. It's not in all ads.

Body

The copy is the main text of the ad. Some ads may take a minimalist approach, a line or two or a single paragraph. Other ads may be quite text-heavy with paragraphs of information, possibly arranged in columns newspaper style. While the words are the most important part of the copy, visual elements such as indentation, pull-quotes, bullet lists, and creative kerning and tracking can help to organize and emphasize the message of the body of the ad.

Photographic Assets

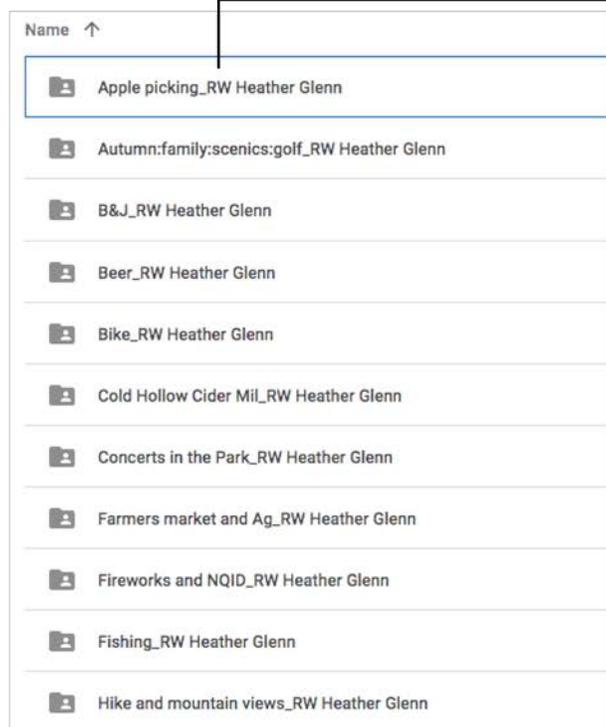

Dealing With Resolution and Photos:

The resolution of photos is critical in design depending on the medium you are working in. What is acceptable for web design does not translate to print.

Images on a screen are made of colored squares called pixels. When you're printing an image you may encounter the term ppi (pixels per inch) or dpi (dots per inch). Most printing services require a certain density of pixels in the image (ppi) to be able to render a print that looks good, with smooth color transitions so you can't see each individual dot on the paper. Typical printing ppi values range from 150 to 300 ppi, although some high-end magazines may require images which are 1200 ppi.

Displaying images on a screen requires far fewer pixels than printing. This is because the density of pixels on the screen is significantly less than what is required for printing. To fill a typical monitor, you only need an image that is 1920 by 1080 pixels in size. That's about the same size image you need for a 4 x 6 printed image at 300 ppi, yet at this size the image displays perfectly on a 23 inch diagonal monitor. Ideal screen image resolution (detail an image holds) is 72 pixels per inch. If an image is less than 72ppi, it will appear fuzzy (what we call pixelated).

Access to Photo Library

Revitalizing Waterbury has built and acquired a photo library of hundreds of images. RW owns the usage rights to these photos. They are available for free to Waterbury businesses and organizations as long as they are used to promote Waterbury and proper photo credit is given. Below is a list of subjects in the photo library. If you would like to use any of the photos contact info@revitalizing-waterbury.org, or call 802-793-6029.

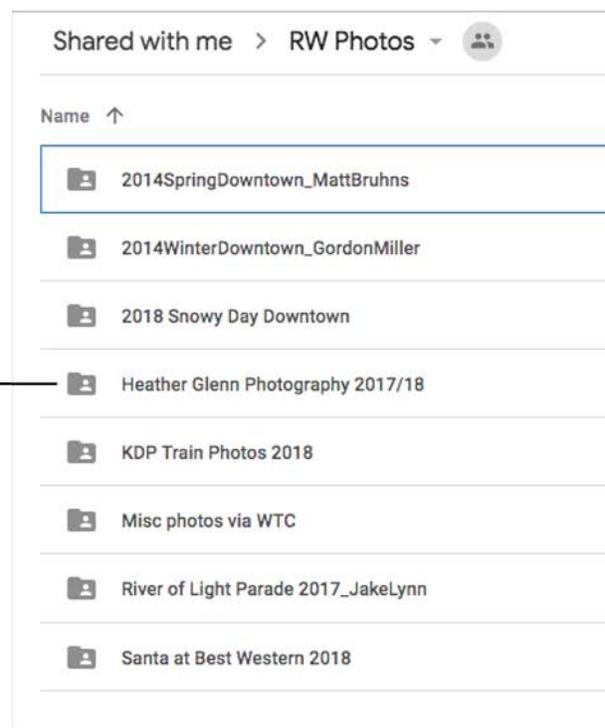

Photo Credit Language

The name of the photographer is at the end of the folder labels (i.e. Heather Glenn, Gordon Miller, etc.). If there is no photographer name than credit only needs to go to Revitalizing Waterbury. Proper photo credit language that involves a photographer should be: Revitalizing Waterbury/Heather Glenn (note the correct photographers name inserted after the /).
